FINE TEXTILE MILL OF SIXTY THOUSAND SPINDLES FOR LYNN

Board of Trade and Merchants Association Boom New $850,000 Cotton Manufacturing Project.

Business Men Also Seek Establishment of Trolley 'Freight Service Between Shoe City and Boston.

LYNN, Mass. Tentative plans for a 60,000 spindle cotton mill in two sec ms, each to be seven stories in height, 300 feet long by 130 wide, and employ-ing 1000 hands, are under way here by prominent New England manufacturers. It is proposed to capitalize for $850,000 and to build the factories on the property on lower Washington street, owned by Joseph W. Breed. This site comprises 90,000 square feet of land, with a deep water frontage of more than 300 feet and an abutment on the street of equally Practically the only obstacle in the way of the immediate consummation of the project, as the promoters announce that they are otherwise ready to go ahead, is the indefinite status of the proposed $10,000,000 harbor development.

proposition now confronting Lynn. - The matter has gained the earnest attention of the Board of Trade, the merchants association and of prominent men of affairs in the city and there is a lively possibility that the mills will be erected on the location mentioned above regardless of the unsettled condition of the harbor development propo-

Prominent mill men from all parts of New England have looked the ground over and give encouragement to the Lynn has many natural advanfor a cotton industry including tages for a cotton industry including the fact that it has the room on property now only partly developed, that it is on the coast and that the humidity of Mayor Walter A. There are other properties on the harbor front adjoining the Breed estate which would be available in the event This evening at 6:30 o'clock the anthat the mills were erected and the success of the undertaking warranted the purchase of additional land for the erection of other buildings.

Coincident with the mill project is the fact that business men of this city are uniting in an effort to induce the Boston & Northern Street Railway Company to establish, as soon as possible a trolley freight service between Lynn and Boston, similar to that in operation on other lines of that road. They have already approached local officers of that corporation and from them received much favorable consideration.

Some day this week a delegation of business men, representing the Lynn Board of Trade and Merchants Association, will visit the office of the company in Boston for the purpose of talking the matter over with President Sullivan and other officials of the road. They expect favorable action in view of Lynn's nereasing business and the limited shipping facilities now existing.

No legislative action would be re quired to give the Boston & Northern the right to establish such a service through the streets of Lynn, as the franchise and charter under which the road is now operating gives it that right. At present the Lynn division handles much of its own freight through this city, but does no public business of that kind.

It is purposed to have the company tracks into the factory yards of the business districts of Lynn and West Lynn and to transfer the bulk of the freight over these tracks at night. Package express business would be confined to the daytime.

At present the cost to the manufacturers of Lynn for hauling shoe cases, etc., is 50 cents a ton.

ROSE EXHIBITION UNIQUE FEATURE OF PARIS FLOWER SHOW

PARIS-A unique feature of the flower show which is being held here is the retrospective rose exhibition. This exhibition, organized by the amateur, M. Gravereaux, is divided into several sections. One includes all kinds of roses, from the wild rose to the most perfected hothouse type. Among the innumerable specimens are roses such as they were grown at different periods of history. M. Gravereaux has collected all manner of old manuscripts. He has even had casts taken of ancient reliefs and details of facades where roses figured as decora-

These many documents show the birthplace of the rose to have been in Asia. It found its way from Persia and Arabia to Greece and Rome, and then clambered up through the ages, inspiring architects, poets and painters, lending itself as an inexhaustible theme for medieval embroiderers of court ladies' robes, as well as for modern lace-makers and designers The part the rose played in heraldry and numismatography is attested by show cases of coats of arms and coins. One collection of the latter was loaned by a crowned head. FOR LONGER ROUTE

BERLIN-If the telegram received by the Frankfurter Zeitung from Constantinople is correct the Turkish council of ministers, which has been discussing the question of the Bagdad railway, has completely altered the decision recently arrived at and referred to in these columns. It is reported that the council has now decided not to sanction the scheme for bringing the railway to the sea at Alexandretta, but to agree to the original route proposed by the Bagdad railway convention, from Adana to Tel Habesh via Bagtsch.

It appears that the sole reason for the adoption of the longer route to Aleppo by way of Alexandretta, was for the purpose of encouraging the trade of the district, for it had been pointed out in the Turkish Parliament that the inhabitants of northern Syria were anxious for that route to be adopted for the reason already mentioned.

The refusal of the council to sanction the longer route, the construction of which would have cost the railway company a very much larger sum of money, is a complete reversal of the opinion they originally expressed. In the event of this final decision being adhered to it would seem that the only means of tapping Aleppo by the Bagdad railway will be by means of a branch line from Tel Habesh.

CRETAN QUESTION

CONSTANTINOPLE-The powers are at present discussing the question of arriving at a solution in Crete, an announcement which is welcomed by the Porte. It is understood, by at least two of the powers, that the form to be adopted has been agreed upon, while the views of the other two powers are still being awaited. It is understood that the Porte will desire to reserve to itself the right to utilize Suda bay in certain circumstances, but it is questionable whether the powers will accede to this PARIS-According to the Petit Parisien, M. Pinchon, the French foreign minister, while in London recently, evolved, during the course of a conversation with Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign minister, a plan for the solution of the Cretan question. It is reported that the plan has already been submitted to-Russia and Italy, and that these two powers will agree to the proposals. It is reported that, according to the scheme, the Cretan Assembly should be requested by the protecting powers to admit Mussulman members, and that they should restore the status quo as it existed before 1908, whereby Crete would retain her autonomy under the suzerainty of Turkey, and M. Zaimis-should be reappointed high commissioner.

Yale's victory over Princeton Saturday was rather unexpected and indicates that the New Haven college has one of those Yamous nines that is never beaten until the last man is out. Should the team succeed in repeating this victory at Princeton next Saturday, it will eliminate the New Jersey team from cham-

The return of Potter and Rogers to the squad has seemed to strengthen the team materially, and the discovery of McLaughlin as a pitcher has done much to bolster up that department and give Hicks a chance to get back into championship form. The batting of the men in the Cornell game should certainly give the followers of the crimson considerable encouragement for the Yale series. Williams and Amherst are both entitled to places well up in the standing. The showing made by these teams has been due largely to the work of Temple-ton and McClure in the box. University of Maine easily won the championship of that state, but can hardly be classed

The rule first mentioned reads: "There shall be no coaching during the progress of the game by anybody connected with either of the teams." For the violation of this the offending side shall be warned ouce by the referee, and if the offense is repeated the offended side shall be given a free throw for the basket. The rule in relation to fouls reads: "A player mak-ing four 'personal fouls' shall be dis-qualified for the remainder of the game." "Personal fouls" are distinguished as holding, blocking, pushing, tripping, running into, or charging an oponent, and unnecessary roughness. It is thought that this rule in particular will work to good advantage. It will have the effect of eliminating the roughness the same as was intended by the old rule, and at the same time not force a penalty on a player where there was no intent to violate in a manner which would call forth condemnation.

Boston and New York each have two victories to their credit and should either of these two teams win the finals tomorrow the trophy will become the perpetual property of the victor. Philadelphia has one victory and another this year would make all three tied at two each and the winner in 1911 would secure permanent possession.

This trophy is one of the most highly prized in American golf. It was first played for in 1902, when it was won by Boston. That city successfully defended it in 1903 and 1904 and secured permanent possession. In 1905 a second cup was put up which was won in 1905 by New York, in 1906 by Philadelphia, in 1907 and 1908 by Boston and last year by New York.

Three systems have been used in com puting the points. 'At first the points were figured on the basis of number of holes each player was up. This system was later abandoned and the Nassau system adopted. In 1906 the present system of one point for each match was adopted. The teams which will represent the three cities will be selected from the following players:

TFILS CONGRESSME HISTORY OF AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Chicago Attorney, at Hearing

of the hearings on the medical bills to- request. day was occupied by Attorney Fred A. Bangs of Chicago, representing the National League for Medical Freedom.

Mr. Bangs read a carefully prepared paper, intended to prove the assertion that the controlling force of the Amer- similar to these before you in that it ican Medical Association is a "doctors' also provided for the establishment of a trust" and that while it is composed of a minority of the association, it has been largely confine myself at this time to able, through systematic organization the constitutional objections to this kind and tireless industry, to place itself in of legislation, and I respectfully urge

Many good members of the association and many laymen outside the association, the speaker claimed, had been deceived by the philanthropic and altruistic professions of the trust and were actually favoring legislation to carry forward its designs.

Attorney Bangs gave a detailed history of the American Medical Association, including liberal extracts from letters, editorials and various other documents, all tending to prove the existence of the "doctors' trust." The trust had even been able, he noted, to secure statements in the two national political platforms in 1908 favoring the Owen bill and Senator Owen, in introducing that bill, said expressly that he was acting at the request of the American Medical Association.

Mr. Bangs read several circular letters from officers of the association, addressed to doctors generally, advocating the control of congressional nominating conventions wherever possible, so that men might be sent to Congress who would favor the Owen bill.

As further indicating the existence of a "dectors' trust" Attorney Bangs re-ferred at length to the uniformity of medical fees everywhere; to the refusal of the American Medical Association to permit its members to treat professionally persons on the medical blacklist; to the repeated efforts of the American Medical Association to control the publication of all medical books; to its gress, can be found power to pass meas-blacklisting of medical journals not published by American Medical Association for the following purposes? people; to its threatened monopolization of the retail drug trade, and to the fact that it admittedly has gone into politics for the purpose of furthering its schemes as here outlined.

Former Governor Bates of Massachusetts, appearing for the opponents, made a decidedly favorable impression on the committee by his address Saturday. He had prepared an address, which gave his argument in connected form, but such was the interest of members of the committee, especially in the constitutional questions raised by Mr. Bates, that he was compelled to depart from his manuscript at frequent intervals, and during the hour or more that he was on the stand he talked offhand, in reply to committee questions for at least half an hour. It is his opinion that Congress has no right under the constitution to do the things provided for in the pending bills. He even questioned constitutional authority for the establishment of the great department of agriculture. He did not undertake to say that the people were not in favor of many of the unconstitutional things the general govern-ment was doing, in its trend toward paternalism, but he thought they should not be encouraged without an amendment to the constitution first being made. During this part of the testimony, decisions of the courts were cited and exchange of opinion between him and the committee, much of which indicated that

Powers of the Federal Government Concerning Health.

The federal government is one of enumerated powers. It has no general police power. It has nothing to do with regulating the internal social conditions and intervening acts, instrumentalities of the states. Its powers, in so far as and dealings that directly bring about foreign countries and toward each other and to matters common to the states for which they require a common agent. Matters of ordinary internal government are reserved to the states, to be exercised as local conditions may require.

U. S. v. De Witt, 9 Wall. 41. The reason for this is especially ap parent in case of health regulations; for the local problems vary so much in the different parts of the country as to require that they be left to local state and municipal governments. Federal government in such matters was never contemplated.

If no general police power has been granted to the federal government, that power cannot be exercised by it in the least degree. If the protection of the health, morals or safety of the people is not within the purposes for which the federal government was established, that entire field of activity is cut out

Certain States.

The absence of scientific health regula tion and protection in certain parts of the country furnishes no constitutional by Former Governor Bates reason to justify the federal government in trying to supplement local action by measures of its own. The constitution gives it no power to invade the territory of a state for official services in domestic matters. If it cannot Gives New Reasons for Washington, June 4, 1910, in opposition undertake the service independently, it Defeat of Proposed Bills. to the bills providing for the establishing cannot send officials to cooperate with tion to them or to the people of the territory concerned. Why should the people of Massachu-setts, Michigan, Illinois, already overburdened with taxation for their own efficient public services, be taxed for the suppression of diseases in other states, because the people of those other states neglect their special obligations. The fact that the federal constitution gives no power to Congress to levy taxes for such local purposes, shows conclusively that it never intended that the government should enter into these purely local services.

Sec. 8. "No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken."-U. S. Constitution, Art. I., Sec. 9.

Where a nuisance or epidemic exists in a state so near a border line as to affect a sister state, the state to be protected has its quarantine power, and often a remedy by injunction in the United States supreme court to compel action in the other state.

In Georgia v. Tennessee Copper Com-pany, 206 U. S., 230, Georgia obtained an njunction against a copper smelting company situated in Tennessee to prevent injury to the people and the vegetation of Georgia by copper fumes.

Where interstate streams are polluted the remedy betwee: states by injunction is complete and exclusive. Congress has no more authority over interstate waters litia to suppress insurrections and repel than over interstate waters, as regards the purity of the water. It has power to regulate the interstate and foreign commerce hereon and to regulate navigation for the purposes of such commerce, but that is all.

Harrigan v. Connecticut Lumber Co., 29 Mass. 580; Shively v. Bowlby, 152

In Kansas v. Colorado, 185 U. S. 125, Kansas was held on demurrer to be entitled to an injunction against Colorado, to require the latter state to prevent interference by corporations and indi-viduals with the flowage of the Arkansas river.

In Missouri v. Illinois, 180 U. S. 208 Missouri was held on demurrer entitled to an injunction against Illinois on proof that the local sanitary district of Chicago was polluting the Mississippi river

A resolve was offered in the House by Representative O'Brien of Boston providing that the following questions shall be placed upon the official ballot to be voted upon by the people at the next state election: "Shall it be the policy of the commonwealth to authorize the combination of street railway or elevated railway companies with steam railroad corporations, or the control of one by the other?" The resolve was referred to the committee on rules.

The first subject taken up for debate was the Berkshire trolley bill. Representative Washburn of Worcester again spoke against the bill.

In the Senate today on motion of Senator Tinkham of Boston the Senate re considered its rejection of the Senate bill for the distribution and sale of milk in Boston. Senator Tinkham then offered a substitute resolve for the issuing of permits for such sale, and this was adopted by a vote of 22 to 13. Senator Parker of Boston had taken rom the table the bill for milk distributing stations in cities and towns and stated that the attorney-general regarded it as doubtful whether the bill was constitutional, and it was rejected.

This statement that the shippers were furnished with copies of the new tariff as early as May I and 2 is in direct conflict with that of the representatives of the shippers appointed at the Omaha meeting, who came to Washington last Monday and declared that it had been impossible for them to obtain these copies prior to May 17.

Attorney-General Wickersham today acquainted President Taft with the facts on the government's side of the case. Answering the charge of inconsistency, he pointed out that both houses of Congress have absolutely refused to adopt the recommendations of the President for the legalizing of traffle agreements, and for that reason the law upon the subject remained unchanged and had to be enforced. The road should New York Central declared that the rest for future purposes, merce commission and a copy of the missioner Lane said: charges made by western shippers.

Outline of the Argument

It is stated authoritatively that the arguments the railroad delegation will present to President Taft are as follows: First, that the increases in tariffs to date affect only a minute part of the entire freight.

Second, that there was no agreement of any kind whatsoever between the railroads in the legal sense. All that happened was "that one railroad gave Many Meetings Bearing notice to others that it would increase rates and if the railroad notified desired to take the same step, well and good."

Third, that the present uncertainty of value of securities.

Readiness to Submit Rates to Commission Announced

NEW YORK - President William C Brown of the New York Central lines states that he and his associates are anxious to have the question of increased freight rates decided as quickly as possible, and that so far as his lines are concerned he is willing to leave the matter entirely with the interstate commerce

"Nearly every increase in pay of employees became effective as of April 1," adopt its bill, thus hastening the time said Mr. Brown. "The increase on the New York Central lines alone aggregates $8,250,000 per annum; and, in order to secure arbitration, which at first was refused by the men, it became necessary for me to agree that the result of the arbitration should be retroactive, becoming effective as of April 1."

INQUIRY BY CONGRESS INTO FRIAR LANDSALE WILL BE DEMANDED

WASHINGTON-An appeal to At torney General Wickersham in connection with the sale of Philippine friar lands to the sugar trust was promised today by Representative Martin (Dem., Col.), who asserted that he would not desist from his efforts to force a congressional investigation until he had opportunity to present to the House facts which he claims he can produce. In a public statement Mr. Martin said:

"The legal services of the Taft-Wick ersham law firm (Strong and Cadwallader) for the sugar trust were but as incident of the situation which enabled a member of that firm to make the friar land deal in the Philippines.

"Ever since this country acquired the erned them in one capacity or another During all these years the Taft-Wicker sham law firm has been handling the le gal end of the big business in the Philip pines. Railroad contracts, municipal franchises, harbor improvements, bond issues, upon which the Philippine government guaranteed interest, passed through this firm. And during all this time, Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, President Taft's closest friend and companion, has been chief of the bureau of insular affairs, having immediate jurisdiction over the Philippines.

"So that, when Mr. Wickersham, hav ing become attorney-general, appeared at the insular bureau to investigate the sale of the friar lands to the Havemevers and other sugar trust stockholders, he needed no credentials. Henry W. Taft. Wickersham and Edwards had been handling Philippine affairs too long to require formal introduction.

that discussed the bill in executive session for more weeks, in all giving it more than two months of careful consideration. The result was that the bill as reported to the House by the committee is substantially the bill which the House passed. In the Senate there was no such consideration. The Senate committee held brief hearings and reported the bill recommended by the progressives. The bill as it passed the Senate was not a committee bill in any sense, save that the

Bill Represents Victory for Senate Progressives

It will be generally interesting to know that the Senate bill, excepting as to the commerce court, follows precisely along the lines of the minority report made by Senators Clapp and Cummins of the committee at the time the bill was reported several months ago. The progressives of the Senate seem to have on a victory of considerable importance. Speaking about the Senate bill, Sena-

The shipper himself will also be able to appear in his own right as the result of amendments we are able to make. "We struck out sections 7 and 12. "The points urged in our minority report were all practically adopted, except as to the commerce court. We were unable to strike this court out of the bill. We shall undoubtedly require additional judges for that court any-way, and in time the people will surely demand its abolition, as it establishes a court of original jurisdiction at the seat of government. But while the court will be abolished in time its judges will be continued, and an assignment of them will be made to the various judicial circuits. What We Think of Books Sent Us For Review

A book of "letters" has this decided advantage over other books that it can be picked up and read at any time. In the present instance each letter being complete and not depending on any other provides, say, five to 10 minutes of good reading, and is in itself a gem of thought; written, too, not for purposes ness is the predominating feature of J. S. Mill's style of letter writing, seriousness indicative of intensely contemplative thought. It never seemed to occur to him to write of things in lighter vein even if he saw them so, and as he seems to have been accepted as an "authority" at an early age he never made light of the responsibility.

Mr. Elliot in his introduction tells us that by reason of his extraordinary education Mill had a quarter of a century start of the average man. He started learning to read when he was 2 years old. He began Greek at 3 and when still only 7 he had read the whole of Herodotus and Xenophon; at 8 the first six dia-logues of Plato. Mill observes, "My father demanded of me not only the utmost that I could do, but much that 1 could by no possibility have done."

Mill had quite early in his career clear estimate of the value of his own qualities. "The only thing which I can usefully do . . . is to work out principles, which are of use for all times, though to be applied cautiously and circumspectly to any: principles of morals. government, law, education, above all self-education. . . The only thing that I believe I am really fit for is the investigation of abstract truth, and the "I am rather fitted to be a logical exenabled him to apply himself unremittingly to whatever subject he had set himself to unrayel.

Herbert Spencer's method of solving a problem, too, was to avoid conscious effort and await the light until the whole matter was illumined clearly, whereas Mill was accustomed to attack a puzzle again and again, never leaving it or thinking that he perfectly under. In those early days of the nineteenth century letter writing was a much more serious matter than it is today. How different is the ordinary idea of a letter nowadays from that of J. S. Mill:

"To me it appears a very weighty matter to write a letter; there is scarcely ing that we do which requires more complete possession of our faculties in their greatest freshness and vigor; AERONAUTS BACK and all the more so because if it is elaborate it is good for little."

The result is that Mill's letters resolve themselves into a series of essays on cur rent topics which seem to have been all written with the greatest care and are often pregnant with interest

Mill's highly practical and analytical mind would not allow him to ally himself with any of the Christian denominations of the time and it would seem as if to him "the mystery of godliness' was a sealed book because his intensely close reasoning left no room for faith as he found it generally entertained in the sects and dogmas of his time. Writing on the subject of his book, "Utilitarianism." to Alexander Bain, he said

"I have not written it in any hostile spirit toward Christianity, though undoubtedly both good ethics and good metaphysics will sap Christianity if it persists in allying itself with bad. The best thing to do in the present state of the human mind is to go on establishing positive truths and leave Christianity to reconcile itself with them the best way it can. By that course, in so far as we have any success, we are at least doing something to improve Christianity," which meant of course Christianity as he saw it expounded and exemplified around him

On the question of Morocco, M. Deschanel declares that France will be able to maintain her supremacy without the policy of conquest, and, he points out, while France must preserve her influence over the approaches of Algeria, the question of foreign policy must have prior claim on those of colonial policy. At the end of 1907, M. Deschanel emphasized the importance of policing the Algerian frontier by the native police force trained by Algerian officers in accordance with the terms of the agreements of 1901-2. OF TESTS ARE MADE BY TECHNOLOGY MEN

An interesting series of experiments is being conducted by the naval architecture department of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on the horsepower necessary for a vessel to attain a given speed with a given propeller.

On a bright day the crowds sauntering up and down the esplanade which runs along the Charles river basin notice a curious looking little craft running up and down the river, apparently without aim. This is the vessel built by the naval architecture department of the institute at an approximate cost of $5000, donated by a gentleman who has placed whatever sum may be necessary to bring the series of experiments to a successful termination at the disposal of the department-with the stipulation that his name shall not be made public. . The boat is an exact model of the revenue cutter Manning, on which a scries of progressive speed trials, from five knots to 161/2 were run some years ago to determine the horsepower necessary to develop a given speed.

-The series of tests on the Manning was duplicated by a number of Technology men, including Professor Peabody, this spring on the Manning's sister ship, the Gresham, over the Provincetown course. Professor Peabody is at the head of the naval architecture course at the institute, and is one of the greatest authorities in the country on such

While at the present time all the work on the model is being done by professors and instructors connected with the department, it is probable that undergraduates will be given work on board for the next few years as part of their regular course at the institute.

Ornamental Pockets

Pockets are proving an inexhaustible nine for displaying trimming of various kinds. There are the large square shapes that are ornamented with braid, embroidery or buttons, giving the decora-tive plastron so much in vogue, says the New Orleans Picayune.

Then, again, there are the pointed shapes that are frequently used when the lines of a coat are built on the sharp slanting scheme.

Stitched flaps are placed on the tail-ored suits of severe cut; even lace is used on the linen costumes for ornament rather than for use, for it must be re-membered that the perfection of line must not be destroyed by the contents.

bonds looking for good bonds cheap. Available selections then were comparatively few when all that goes to make a bond of high character was considered.

had almost entirely alienated the private investor from such issues and what business was being done with him, even in the semi-investment class of securities, was more or less under the incentive of a probable appreciation in market price within a few months, based on good showing then being made in railroad earnings and general improvement in industrial affairs.

Since then all standard issues have sold off from 1 to 3 points and in the ranks of the medium grade bonds large inroads in prices have been made.

Through the decline, the level of prices of many so-called secondary bonds has fallen to bargain counter figures. There ments. Kansas City Railway & Light Company Earnings for the Year Make Best Showing in History of Organization.

ITS MORTGAGE DEBT

That the Kansas City Railway & Light company will be able to maintain its past record of liberal dividends in the future is clearly demonstrated from the fact that the 12 months ended May 31 last its gross earnings expanded almost $650,000, as compared with the previous 12 months, and the net after payment 283,353 of operating expenses and all interest charges was some $287,000 more. In fact the gross for the period mentioned was the largest on record for a single 12 months.

Following are the increases and per cents of increase in revenues and expenses for the 12 months ended March 31 last, as compared with the previous

In connection with operations of the Kansas City Railway & Light Company, attention is called to consolidated mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company of Kansas City, Mo., the entire capital stock of which is owned by the first-mentioned company. The total amount of this issue now outstanding is $5,843,000, and is being offered to investors by J. P. Morgan & Co. and Lee, Higginson & Co. The company owns and controls substantially all the street railways in Kansas City, Mo., Kansas City, Kan., and several adjacent cities, the total trackage represented being about 231 miles, exclusive of switches and sidings, and the population served is about 500,000.

The entire mortgage debt of the company is $11,500,000, less an actual cost of physical properties. The mortgage referred to above covers 117 miles, including narly all lines of vital importance in the business district of Kansas City, Mo., where the franchise expires in 1925. It is also a closed mortgage, except for $1,657,000 reserved to retire underlying divisional bonds, of which $1,-350,000 mature April 1 next year. The capital stock of the company is $5,636,-800, and continuous dividends have been paid for the last 20 years.

It is the intention of the management of the Metropolitan Street Railway system to spend at least $1,000,000 this year in improvements, which have been made necessary by the rapid growth of the territory served. Already it has ordered 50 new pay-as-you-enter cars, at a total cost of approximately $400,000, while improvements to the power facilities which are to be made immediately will entail an additional expenditure of probably about $400,000 or $500,000. Officials of the company state that, owing to the rapid and healthy growth of Kansas City it will be necessary for the company to spend at least $1,000,000 a year for some time to come in improvements and additions in order to meet the increased demand of the public.

AMERICAN SHIPS TURN INTO BARGES

NEW YORK-One by one the American sailing vessels are coming to this port from all parts of the world to be dismantled and converted into coal barges, which are said to be more profitable. The American bark Charmer came June 25 in Sunday from Port Elizabeth, South Africa, on her last run under sail. She was formerly a ship, but her owners later rigged her as a bark.

The American ship Shenandoah, which is now 110 days out from San Francisco, and is expected at this port soon, will also become a coal barge. She is the biggest American sailing ship afloat, and was built 20 years ago.

AWAITING CROP DEVELOPMENTS

CHICAGO-President Forgan of Na June 11 tional City Bank, says business recently June 14 has shown signs of revival, but that une 18 total volume is much below a year ago, with a notable falling off in some quarters. The tendency is to await crop developments, and curtailment of advances to land speculation is the significant seature of the interior loan account, though a vast amount is still tied up in this way.

Crop conditions are satisfactory, but the most important recent development has been the decline in commodity prices. There is little if any speculation in general business and much financing must be done.

CANALS IN AMSTERDAM, HOLLAND.

HERE are two scenes in Amsterdam, Holland, showing the old buildings in the shipping quarter. In the smaller cut the old building called the "Waag" was the East India Company's house. The word means "weigh," for it was here that the cargoes were stowed and packed when they came in or were being sent out. The flat canal barges still ply on the canal, but modern ships cannot approach the old storehouse in the channel which once accommodated the East India trading ships.

The larger cut shows the quarter of the town where the sailors' boarding houses crowd together around the old waterways. Here all manner of material for ships may also be bought. The narrow staircase along the edge of the canal at the left and the steps at the right descending to the water's edge may be traced in the picture. Novel Map of the Holy Land

E. A. Marshall, instructor in mission at the Moody Bible Institute, and his wife have just completed a relief map of Palestine and the Holy Land that is attracting much attention, says the Chicago Post. The map, which is 8x12 feet, is made of papier-mache and colored and fitted with tinted electric globes to assist in the study of the country. Over 500 newspapers were used in forming the pulp for the map, which was molded on to a wire netting. Mr. Marshall and his wife spent several months on the work, and it is now being studied by many Bible teachers in different parts of the city.

Mr. Marshall placed two green electric lights at each extremity of the map, showing the location of Dan and Beersheba, the two extreme points in the country. There are six red lights, showing the situation of the cities of refuge; two blue bulbs that mark the two capital cities, and two frosted white lights showing Bethlehem and Nazareth. Five amber lights mark the five Philistine cities, The railways are outlined in white, the highways in black and the rivers in

The "Wild West" in Sweden

An amusing incident occurred during Mr. Roosevelt's journey from Stockholm. The royal special train conveying Mr. Roosevelt stopped at a small station. The platform was crowded, and in the center (says the Telegraph's Malmo correspondent) was a long-haired, belted cowboy, dressed in buckskins, with a cowboy band, who ordered the police about, made speeches and led the cheering. Mr. Roosevelt was much amused when he learned that this was part of a Wild West show giving entertainments in Sweden.

Democracy and Responsibility

IT has been intimated in many quarters lately, and especially since it has seemed quite reasonable to look for a change in the complexion of the next Congress, that Democratic leaders are far from feeling confident as to the benefit which the party as a whole will derive from victory at the polls. With victory will come responsibility, and no matter how pleasing the former may be to those who have so long endured defeat, the latter is something to be contemplated, as they regard it, with misgivings.

While in opposition, the Democrats can pick flaws in existing policies and existing legislation to their hearts' content, and it is legitimately in the game of politics that they shall keep the party in power in an attitude of defense, and drive it occasionally into an attitude of apology. A reversal of these conditions, however, would call for very different talents and very different methods. In office the Democrats must become constructive and the field of criticism must be left to those whom they have supplanted.

But why should they be fearful? Already Joseph W. Folk has prepared for them in outline a program which they may consistently follow, and which if followed with the ability they can command and the sincerity they ought to have, should lead them through their apparent difficulties and into a strongly entrenched position. True, they have been so long outside the breastworks that they lack the experience commonly deemed necessary to defense, but if they shall take up with stout hearts issues that they believe to be right and fight for them because they are right, they will be doubly fortified against assaults of the enemy.

WITH both President Taft and ex-President Roosevelt scheduled to speak at the National Education convention in Boston in July, it is certain that a large per cent of the delegates will be able to say "present" at roll-call and that few will be "absent" or "tardy' without being able to offer the very best of excuses.

Ir is understood in Washington that Colonel Roosevelt, shortly after his return, will be tendered by President Taft, in behalf of the great powers for which he may be authorized to speak, the chairmanship of the international court of arbitration now in process of organization. The handsome salary of $5000 a month is to be attached to the post. In view of the manner in which the tender is to be made and the exceptional opportunities for well-doing which will accompany it, it is difficult to see how our ex-President can decline it. This newspaper has already dealt with the character, scope and province of the proposed tribunal. While the project did not at first meet with warm approval abroad, the idea that it embraces seems to have impressed itself upon the statesmen of foreign countries as they have examined more closely into it. It is an American idea, and that they regard it as such and are willing to place the responsibility of carrying it out upon American shoulders, and to give this nation whatever of credit may ultimately grow out of it, is evident from their agreement to name Colonel Roosevelt as its head. The compliment is one that the nation should graciously recognize, and if Colonel Roosevelt shall accept the appointment and give to this office the intelligence, ability and energy that have been characteristic of his whole public service, we shall be able to say in later times, and the world will be willing to admit, that the compliment was dictated by wisdom.

"WHEN is a trust not a trust?" is the question which continues to press itself forward for an answer. Whether the officials of several railroads "acting in concert" in the matter of establishing higher rates are trespassers of the law is the problem that the President and Congress are seeking to decide. Perhaps if the railroad officials concerned were to get together and, "acting in concert," should agree to lower rates a great deal could be overlooked and

Future Means of Traveling

WITH the advent of the summer, and the publication of the aviation week fixtures, the public are again discussing with renewed interest the future possibilities of the airship, aeroplane and air travel generally. New discoveries and inventions are nowadays developed at a rapid rate, and when it is remembered how comparatively short a time after the first experiments with aeroplanes they were brought to a sufficient degree of perfection to enable Messrs. Paulhan and Graham White to make their recent epoch-making flights, one may well look forward with confidence to a day in the near future when travel by airship or aeroplane will be as common and as usual an occurrence as is a trip by motor car today. The question as to the possibility of making long over-sea journeys by airship is as freely discussed as perhaps any question pertaining to air travel, and in this connection it is interesting to note how history is repeating itself. The same trade winds are blowing today as were blowing when Christopher Columbus set sail in 1492, on his memorable voyage from the coasts of Portugal to discover the great continent of America, and, as has been already reported, an aeronaut who intends to make the attempt to cross the Atlantic in a "dirigible" will avail himself of these same trade winds. The party will consist of two or more men, and there is every reason to suppose that larger airships will soon be making the same voyage, carrying who dares say how many passengers. In many quarters it is maintained that much has yet to be learned about the winds and air currents that encircle our globe, and that this knowledge, coupled with better and more powerful engines, will enable air voyages to be undertaken with the ease and regularity enjoyed by passengers in one of the present day monster ocean greyhounds.

As was announced in these columns recently, a "Zeppelin" airship is being fitted with cabins to accommodate some twenty passengers, and it is impossible not to believe that this is the initial step in the direction of the "air liner." Given ordinary weather conditions it is evident that a dirigible air vessel can be relied upon, for a time table is announced to appear shortly, giving the hours of departure, etc., of the airships which are shortly to travel between Berlin and other cities. The latest Cunard liners have done much to reduce the distance between America and England-but even the performance of the fastest steamer will seem slow compared with the speed of the airship of the future. How near the day is when these aerial monsters will be common objects in the sky, no one can say, but judging from the progress already made the day is not far distant when transatlantic aerial trips will be undertaken.

THE manuscript of "The School for Scandal," in Sheridan's own handwriting, soon to be auctioned in London, serves to call attention to the fact that playwrights of the present day cannot hope to leave such treasures to be sought for by collectors. The almost universal employment of the indispensable stenographer and the typewriter seems destined to make the "original manuscript" go quite out of fashion.

Good

Reason

for Delay

THE Boston finance commission recommends that the Elevated holding bill be delayed for a year, and protests against its being passed at this session of the Legislature in the latest form in which it has been presented. There would seem to be good ground for this protest. The bill reported by the street railway committee not only provides for the acquisition and the holding of the stocks and bonds of other street railway companies by the Boston Elevated Street Railway Company-a feature that had been approved by the joint railroad and transit boards—but it also provides for the extension of the leases of the subway, the East Boston and the Washington street tunnels for long terms of years. This important matter was not considered by the transit commission or the railroad commission and was not included in the report made

The future control of these great arteries of transportation should not be decided upon hastily. The corporation counsel has given an opinion on the wisdom of certain provisions in the bill under consideration, but the finance commission does not concur with him in his conclusions. The Central Labor Union has adopted resolutions for presentation to the Legislature demanding that sections 8 and 9 of the Elevated holding bill shall be submitted to a referendum vote before its passage, on the ground that the bill contains no five-cent fare proviso, allows the Elevated corporation the sole use of the subways and tunnels, makes no provision for future underground transportation and affords no protection to the state.

These matters should be fully and carefully considered before the city is bound by law to a course that affects the interests of a coming generation as well as those of the present. The Legislature will be taking safe action if it adopts the recommendation of the finance commission to defer the pending bill, and authorizes the joint board to hold public hearings on the subject for report to the next General Court.

What may be termed "events" or even "epochs" in the airship world are occurring with such frequency that it would be perfectly fitting for sky navigators to adopt as their working motto a paraphrase of those oft-quoted lines of unknown origin-

Boston s Formal Request

Boston proposes to have a world's exposition in 1915 and the Boston-1915 organization has sent a formal request to Congress for government authorization for an appeal to foreign countries to participate in it. The Boston exposition will be different from other world's fairs, and its promoters wish it understood at the beginning that they will in no way enter into competition with either San Francisco or New Orleans for an international show in celebration of the completion of the Panama canal. The Boston exposition "will be unique in emphasizing the most important problems of the day—those relating to the conservation of human resources; for it will deal with fundamental questions of city living which are vital to the future of the United States.'

From this statement it might be inferred that the exposition as planned would not appeal very strongly to the popular mind. Yet one of a similar type held here some months since was largely attended and was not only a local success but made an impression upon the whole country. The idea of civic development is to be enlarged upon to an extent never before undertaken. It is expected to show by models, charts and pictures the best that is being done for industrial, civic and social welfare all over the world. Progress along lines of better homes for workingmen will be illustrated in a way that must attract interest. It is hoped that part of the material in the city planning exposition in Berlin will be available for use here. Boston's general aim in the exposition is a high one and worthy of earnest and hearty support. To give variety, a series of musical events is being arranged, and there will be pageants, athletic contests, water and land sports, and flying machine contests.

Boston asks the federal government to give its approval in order to emphasize to this and other nations its profound interest in civic development, basing its claim for support on the fact that it was first in the field in planning for such an exposition and is focusing the activities of a thousand organizations upon the event, and asserting that the exposition carried out on the plan stated would help not only Boston and New England, but also every city and town in the Boston and New England have not before come to the federal government for aid for any project of this character, and therefore make their request with confidence that it will be granted. Government approval is not all that is required, however, to make the exposition a success; there will still be needed several years of wholesouled and unrelaxed effort on the part of Boston organizations and Boston people. With all these, there can be no question of most gratifying and beneficial results.

THE romance usually associated with the career of the gold seeker will in no degree be heightened by the name of the latest Alaskan placer camp toward which 5000 prospectors are now making their way. No poet, dreamer or romancer ever invented the name "Iditarod," which, however, will no doubt always have a sweet sound to the ones who strike it rich.

WHAT Mr. Taft said on Friday to the graduating class of the Ohio Northern University on the subject of journalism and the spirit of calm impartiality that runs through his remarks is of great interest to all that would see this country moved only by the best and doing only the best. We are not prepared to agree entirely with him in what he says about the influence of editorial writers, so far as his words may be construed to mean that the editorials of a newspaper are disregarded in favor of the matter in the news columns. That is to say, if the editorial writer has less audience than he had twenty-five years ago, it is not perhaps because this ought to be so, but because the newspaper has accustomed the public palate to such a sophisticated diet that it will not relish intelligent deductions drawn from news, but seeks an ever keener flavor. The result of this is the same that always has followed the creation of an unhealthy appetite, a restless satiety.

The public will always like an appeal to its good qualities, and one of those appeals is to act toward it always on the certainty that it is intelligent and that it approves what is good. To force advice and opinion on a man is to disregard his rights, but to discuss with him soberly and on a recognized equality of interests such subjects as hold the attention of the community is at once to inform and to respect him. The editorial that is written in such a spirit is the expression more or less imperfect of what it is hoped the public will think on a given subject, and to write in any spirit of an approach to duty is to perform a very important and serious function that can be of immeasurable help to society. Unless this be done, a moral responsibility will have been deliberately avoided and thousands of innocent persons will have suffered where they might have been helped, for the newspaper goes everywhere and insensibly or not makes its impression. If we are right in this contention and if the editorial page is still different in interest to its readers from the rest of the paper, then under no circumstances should it be overweighted by a mass of trivial and unworthy material that passes as news.

The President is a man with much knowledge of great affairs; he is the executive head of our beloved country, learned in the law, knowing the daliy life of two hemispheres. When a man thus endued points out the ignoble side of easy profit and bids us to be men "of high courage, of accurate judgment, of a love of truth and real patriotism," he makes no rhetorical flourish or display of words, but, as our friendly lawyer, gives us such good advice that if we do not take it, it will argue more than indifference.

Royal Japanese Visitors

HIS HIGHNESS PRINCE FUSHIMI-NO-MIYA of Japan and Princess Fushimi, who have been seeing the sights of the metropolis and are to visit the other principal cities of this country, will be welcome in Boston. The prince states that he is on no mission, and that his coming is entirely unofficial: he is on a world tour of observation. He was over here before in 1895, and his father, Prince Fushimi, senior, has also been on our shores.

The father was an adopted son of the Emperor Komei-Tenno, father of the present ruler of the empire. Prince Fushimi-no-Miya is the youngest of a princely line that is very old in Japan. Although he is not directly related by blood to the imperial family, he has by the common custom of adoption a place among the highest princes about the throne. The prince, a veteran of many naval engagements, was a first lieutenant on the staff of Admiral Togo in the war with Russia. The Princess Fushimi is a daughter of the last Tokugawa Shogun of Japan, who was unseated from power by the revolution that installed the present Emperor in real power.

The Yankees of the east have noted the benefits of travel; they are very observing; they are taking in all that the world lays before their eyes, and they are adopting or adapting in their own land almost everything of value they see elsewhere. And here we shall find the secret of the rapid progress they are making.

WHEN Secretary Meyer spoke to the graduating class at Annapolis of the need of constant efficiency in our navy, he reminded us of the fitness of our naval officers and of the multifarious duties that must be shouldered by him that wears gold lace on a blue coat. Steam and electricity have brought a thousand added duties to what the officer had in the days of topsails and wooden ships, and let us be proud and thankful that these are performed faithfully and well by the men that get their education at Annapolis and repay their country with their services. Sometimes it would seem from the writers of musical comedy and magazine articles as though the work of a naval officer were largely confined to wearing neat white uniforms and high collars. It is to be hoped that he does both in reason, but what we do not grasp is that he is expected to practise a comprehensive and encyclopedic knowledge ranging from bracket plates to the right of asylum, and is expected to do it quickly and authoritatively. That he meets these duties modestly and to the satisfaction of his country is a fact that is quite as much to his credit as the fact that whether the old interest be taken away by steam or not he belongs to a very picturesque and important profession that has always held first place in the hearts of the English-speaking race.

There is about the heaving sea a size and salt immensity that must always refresh; the sea is the very carpet of romance spread out at our feet and is always whispering to us half-forgotten tales of spice and color and adventure that are told in the tradition of a country that came to its own in ships unawed of storm and tempest.

Sometimes we forget the men that go down to the sea, but they are always at their posts, doing their duty and as a relaxation doing more duty. It will be a proud day for this country when its youth can be encouraged to serve it either under the naval ensign or the busy colors of the merchant ship and we have a great class of men that earn their living on blue water as we have a great and admired class that earn it on land in every useful walk of life. When that day comes, this country will be insuring by sea those treasures that it has wrought by land and will have achieved the other half of its development.
